Research Experience and Projects

Centre for Data Futures, King's College London, London, UK

2025 – present	Refining Expressions of Ethical Uncertainty in LLMs via Participatory AI. I am currently working on a project that aims to collect data for refining how LLMs communicate non-quantifiable uncertainty in ethical dialogues through Participatory AI.
Supervisor :	Sylvie Delacroix, Director of Centre for Data Futures, King's College London (Personal Webpage)

Nokia Bell Labs, Cambridge, UK

Summer 2023 Summer 2022	Fairness through Unawareness in NLP classifiers. I completed two Summer Research Internships in the Responsible AI group at Nokia Bell Labs, where I proposed and developed a framework to ensure fairness through unawareness in NLP classifiers by mitigating the use of protected attributes in predictions without compromising performance.
Supervisor :	Daniele Quercia, Director of Responsible AI, Bell Labs Cambridge (Personal Webpage)

Polytechnic University of Turin, Turin, Italy

2020 – 2025	Empowering Multi-lingual Inclusive Communication. A multidisciplinary project aimed at promoting inclusive language in formal communications through the development of a multilingual, AI-powered tool that supports human writers by identifying non-inclusive text and suggesting inclusive reformulations.
2020 – 2025	Concept Drift Detection and Explanation in Deep learning Classifiers. Designing and developing a framework for detecting and explaining concept and data drift in text, image, and speech classifiers to identify performance degradation, ensure robustness over time, and explain the underlying causes of change.
2019 – 2023	Explainability techniques for Text and Image Classifiers. Designing explainable AI techniques to interpret the predictions of text and image classifiers by extracting meaningful features from word-group or pixel-level embedding representations and assessing their importance through perturbation-based analysis.
